Looked like a new horse when moved to a route for the first time here Feb. 5; oh, he'd shown talent prior to that sprinting but he really put it all together with a big optional claiming win here Feb. 5; that being said, the Beyer was still well short of what he likely needs to be a big player here (97) and he stretches out to a much, much longer trip while taking on a few of the best horses around, so the hurdles are many and significant; still, he is improving.
